KEY FINDINGS

Our parents are happy with the remote learning offer. Parents have enjoyed the structure of a timetable with morning calls to start the day while appreciating the flexible timetable, allowing families to adapt children's learning to routines that suits them. The response to the amount of work we have set has been mixed; this is a tricky balancing act – too much is overwhelming and too little and the children will be missing out on the curriculum. Parents have been extremely supportive and grateful for teacher's hard work. Parents have expressed the need for social contact and outdoor activities. As a result, once the children are back in school our focus will be communication and geting active. Some areas in which families have struggled are due to lockdown being a difficult balancing act - we have created our frequent worries of lockdown learning in response to this:
